La Gomera

Where is La Gomera located?
La Gomera is part of the Canary Archipelago. Located at the south of Tenerife it is the second smallest island of the seven Canary Islands, you can reach it by ferry or airplane (domestic flights from other islands).
La Gomera is considered as one of the largest natural paradises in Europe. Declared a BIOSPHERE RESERVE in 2011, it keeps in its forests species that have disappeared from the rest of the World. Black sand beaches, crystalline waters and huge ravines that descend from the centre of the island towards the shore. This strong contrast of the exuberant nature, enchants the visitors with a magic that becomes true with every step.

Living Nature

The Garajonay National Park, (a UNESCO World Heritage Site), with its unique ecosystem, is a park in the centre of the island where the visitor finds ravines and a millenary laurisilva forest. This intense green leafy mass of prehistoric vegetation, typical of the region of Macaronesia, has remained in La Gomera due to the extraordinary climate, always warm, as an eternal spring.

Its 650 km of paths with different degrees of difficulty go all over the island, being the perfect environment for any kind of active sports. There are also signposted cycling routes that go respectfully through this wonderful landscape.

Unique culture

People from La Gomera know how to preserve their island, conserving the nature and their traditions such as “Silbo Gomero” (whistling). A whistled language unique in the World, declared by UNESCO as a Cultural Heritage of Humanity, which has been used, from the beginning of time, by the inhabitants of the island to communicate due to the great distances among the ravines. It is an articulated language with the phonetic characteristics of a spoken language. The “silbo” has been transmitted from one generation to another and nowadays it is taught at schools in La Gomera, since it has an exceptional value.

The sea at its purest

In this part of the Atlantic Ocean, you can watch dolphins and whales near the coast, dive in transparent waters enjoying different colour contrasts of the sea, discover volcanic black sand coves accessible from the sea or go fishing. You will never lose sight of the cliffs and ravines saluting you from the island, mountains surrounded by palm trees going down to the coast. Blue, green and black sand form an unforgettable range of colours during a day at the sea.

Eco Finca Tecina is our environmental friendly finca, based on the permaculture principles, an agricultural design following the patterns of natural ecosystem characteristics. A habitat of about 9.500 sqm, divided into 19 plots, an eco-system in which life of humans is combined with plants and animals in a respectful and healthy way. With holistic management of the land we get a more fertile soil enriched in carbon, improving this way the natural agricultural resources. This preservation and enhancement of the natural resources promotes environmental and social benefits in a sustainable and regenerative way.

Enjoy our own organic harvest, straight from our garden to your table: a variety of fruits and vegetables in the buffet restaurant and a complete ecological menu cooked carefully for your delight.

How to get to La Gomera

The Canary Islands are connected by plane with most of the main European cities.

La Gomera, due to its orography, has not direct international flights, but its airport has flights with the two capital islands of the Archipelago: Tenerife and Gran Canaria.

Coming from Mainland Spain, or any other international airport, the visitor can reach La Gomera via Tenerife South: “Reina Sofía” international airport, Tenerife North: “Los Rodeos” airport or via Gran Canaria. From these last two airports, there are flights with Binter Canarias that land in La Gomera airport, your final destination.

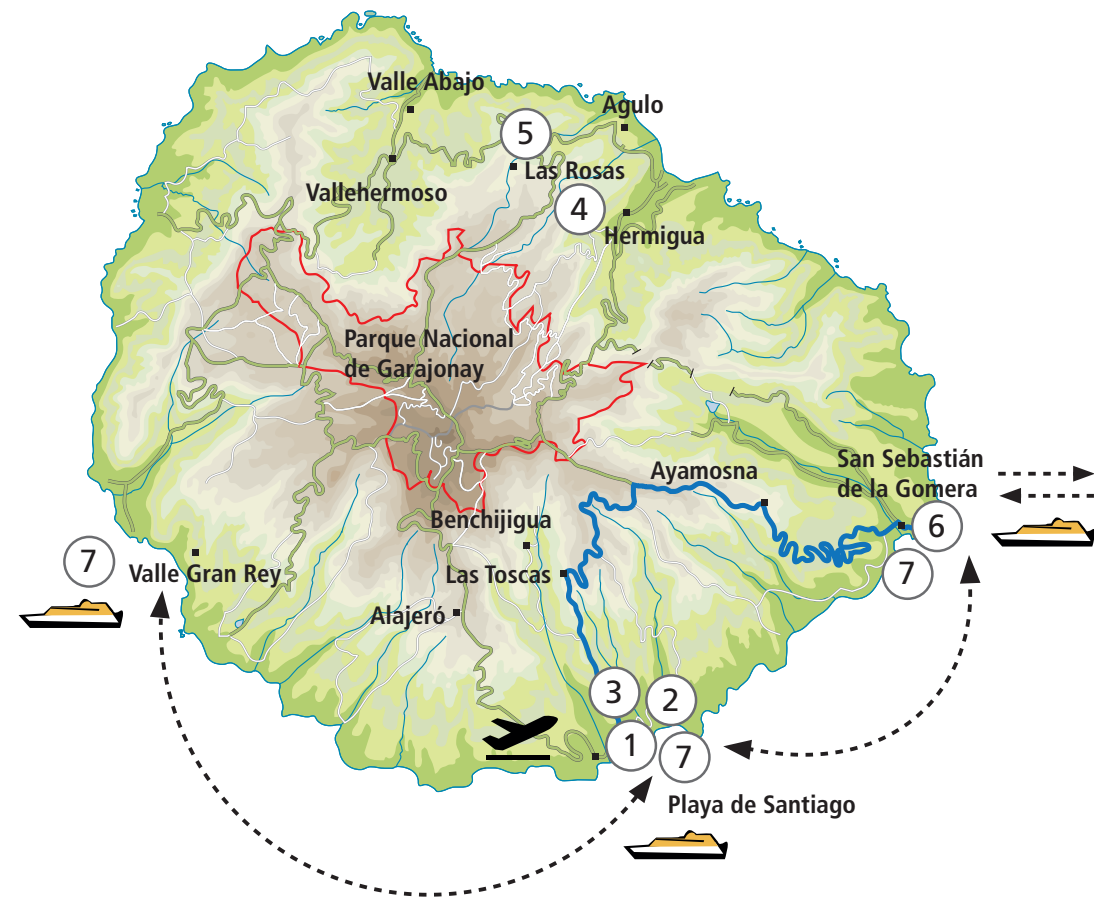

If you travel from Tenerife South, the best way to get to La Gomera is by ferry with Fred. Olsen Express Lines, from Los Cristianos port to San Sebastián de La Gomera.

Once in La Gomera, follow the main road to the south towards “Playa Santiago”, where on the top of the cliff, is situated Hotel Jardin Tecina and Tecina Golf.
